FAQ's

Will I save money? Yes. On average Tyro merchants save 10% per year. Tyro merchant fees are transparent and are based on the actual card type used.

Merchants have the added benefit of an integrated EFTPOS product, reducing money lost via keying errors and time lost due to reconciliation issues.

Who is Tyro? Tyro is the first new entrant in the Australian EFTPOS market in more than 10 years. Tyro holds a banking licence to process all credit and debit cards. Tyro uses state-of-the-art technology, better rates and zero account fees to compete with the dial-up solutions offered by the major banks.

Why should I trust Tyro? Tyro is regulated and audited like any other Australian bank. Tyro is required to hold Tier 1 capital with the reserve bank and meet high technical and prudential standards.

Tyro is the only Australian banking institution to be awarded PCI certification from Visa. Tyro also has IRAP certification, which is a standard required to connect to government systems.

What if I am locked into a contract and my bank charges a break fee? Tyro terminals use broadband, which will allow you to eliminate one or more phone lines from your business. The savings generated by this will offset the cost of a break fee in the first year.

I own the terminal after 3 years but what if something happens to it? Tyro guarantees your terminal for 6 years. If you encounter a problem with the device after 6 years, Tyro places you on a new rental plan, where you will own the device after 3 years as before.

Most terminal issues are software and not hardware related. Tyro can reload the software on your terminal remotely without the need to swap out the device, eliminating any terminal downtime.

How long does it take to set up once I submit the paperwork? 10 – 14 days from submitting the signed paperwork, you will receive your new Tyro terminal.

Who installs it for me? Tyro technology is “plug and play”. Simply plug the terminal into your existing broadband connection and the smart technology will work.
